One of Berk's foundational messages is that development is a dynamic, ongoing process rather than a series of isolated milestones. She emphasizes that:

- Development involves continuous interactions between biology and environment.
- Changes are cumulative and interconnected across domains.
- Timing and individual differences shape developmental pathways.

This perspective encourages a view of children as active participants in their growth, constantly influenced by and influencing their surroundings.

This ecological perspective helps explain variations in development and highlights the importance of culturally responsive practices.
